DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6, 8-12, 14, 26-28, 30-36 and 38 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Malcolm et al. [US 5,790,939] in view of Biggs [US 6,714,486].

Regarding claims 1, 4, 8, 9-12, Malcolm et al. disclose a system [figure 1] for distributing watch information, and processing information comprising: a plurality of hand held terminal devices [22] that acquire and process said watch information [time synchronization]; an information distribution apparatus [20] for distributing said watch information to said plurality of hand held terminal devices; and display means [64, figure 2]] for displaying said watch information on said plurality of hand held terminal devices; wherein said watch information is displayed on said display means of said plurality of hand held terminal devices that depicts at least a current time [not explicitly mentioned, however the timer 48 is capable of this function].

Malcolm et al. disclose the claimed invention except for the time is displayed in form of a video image.

Biggs discloses a system and method for customizing time display including language, multi media/video [abstract; figures 2a-c, 3].

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to incorporate the display design system and/or method of Biggs with Malcolm et al. for the purpose of presenting a unique and personalized time display sequence on a display device.

Regarding claim 2, Malcolm et al. disclose wherein the handheld devices comprising a smart card [64, figure 2] capable of storing and/or carrying information and insertable into the handheld devices.

Regarding claims 3, 14, Malcom et al. disclose wherein the watch information are distributed as data to the plurality of hand held device by using broadcast infrastructure and/or communication infrastructure [satellite].

Regarding claim 5, Malcolm et al. disclose an operating section [22 figure 2] operated to input operational information concerning the watch information; a receiving section [44] that receives the watch information; a storage device [66] that stores the watch information received by the receiving section; and a control unit that reads out the watch information from the storage device according to the operational information.

Regarding claim 6, Malcolm et al. disclose that the handheld terminals are hand held phone set [22] comprising a turner [44] that received watch information form a broadcast station [satellite 26]; a storage device [66] that stores the watch information received by the turner; a data processing section [22] that reads out and processes the watch information stores in the storage device; and a hand held telephone function [59, 60] controlled by the data processing section.

Regarding claims 26-28, 30-36 and 38, the method steps are necessitated by the disclosed apparatus structure.

Claims 7 and 29 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Malcolm et al. and Biggs as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Hori et al. [US 2002/0184154].

Regarding claim 7, Malcolm et al., as modified, disclose the claimed invention wherein the device is capable of accepting a recording medium [smart card] except for explicitly describe that the recording medium provides the watch information to a user, and wherein the user mounts the information recording medium on a hand held terminal device to use the watch information via the recording medium.

Hori et al. disclose a data distribution system wherein a memory card [110, 112] for recording data is mounted to a cellular phone [100, 102].

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to use the teachings of Hori et al. with Malcolm et al., as modified, to facilitate recording/transferring/reproducing watch information to a plurality of devices.

Regarding claim 29, the method steps are necessitated by the disclosed apparatus structure.

Claims 13 and 37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Malcolm et al. and Biggs as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Oshima [US 2002/0150236].

Regarding claim 13, Malcolm et al., as modified, disclose the claimed invention except for the hand held devices are foldable type.

Art Unit: 2841

Oshima discloses a hand held device is a foldable type [1].

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention was made to use the foldable design of Oshima with the devices of Malcolm et al., as modified, for the purpose of providing components protection.

Regarding claim 37, the method steps are necessitated by the disclosed apparatus structure.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Ito et al. [US 2002/0181333] ; Horiguchi et al. [US 2001/0015972] ; Bontempi et al. [US 2002/0150092] ; Pucheu et al. [US 2003/0147367].
